

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Method and apparatus suitable for use within a television receiver for storing program guide information, wherein user interaction with a graphical object is used to determine the level of program information to be stored and the schedule length for the stored program guide information.

5 User may select to store only basic program information, all extended program information, or a combination of basic program information with a desired degree of extended program information.